Floyd Roadifer is current President of the Cloud Peak Backcountry Horsemen and has a lifetime of horse experience - ranching and packing in to hunt and fish all over Wyoming. He started packing regularly almost 40 years ago and takes at least 4 overnight or longer pack trips in the mountains every year.

Silas Davidson is a long time manger of the Cloud Peak Wilderness with the US Forest Service in Buffalo, Wyoming. He grew up helping his parents as outfitters working for NOLS. They packed in food supplies to resupply hiking groups that were out for months at a time. They also did several horse course camping trips a year. Later in life he got more involved with camp jacking and guiding wilderness elk hunts. Silas is familiar with sawbuck style packing as well as "Decker" packing. One of the most interesting things about packing to Silas is how different styles have developed regionally, all to accomplish the same goal..
